

Creating an Accessibility Plan for Your Arts Organization

Publication

Arts Midwest

Org/Publisher Website

Topic Community and Public Engagement | Culturally Specific | DEAI

Location

(Workshop

Only)

Occurance

(Workshop

Only)

Published

Date

(Publications Wednesday, 30 November 2022

Only)

Making programs and services accessible is an important goal. This article outlines a do-it-yourself approach for arts and cultural organizations to plan for disability access that complies with the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA).

Description

Complying with the Americans with Disabilities Act can feel daunting if youâ€™re just starting out. So many checklists to consult! So many webinars to attend! So little buy-in at the top of the organization! But it only takes a little time, training, and creativity to get started on this journey.â€

Whether youâ€™re just beginning to center inclusion for people with disabilities or youâ€™re ready to level-up your efforts, this article outlines a do-it-yourself approach to planning for disability access that works for large and small cultural organizations. The DIY ADA Access Planning workbook (linked at the bottom) is a tool that kickstarts the process of developing an ADA Access Plan right fitted for your organization.

Fee required to access?

No

Access: Link to Content

Speakers